

The goal of an 85% reduction in copper in the next 10 years in Marina del Rey is completely unrealistic.

- Boaters and local businesses were not properly notified of the details in this proposal, especially considering that they will be a "responsible party", and financially liable if the goal is not obtained. I never received any notice of this and it could cause a class action suit.
- Boats are NOT stripped and repainted every 7 to 10 years, as claimed in your study.
- The effect of this TMDL proposal will devastate our local boating community.
