

There is ever increasing demands on water in our state. It seems that too often legislators that are not “on the ground” in the San Joaquin Valley are constantly manipulating water flows to preserve some endangered species. You need to understand that water protection is critical to humans. Water is not something to be wasted on fish and delta preservation. There is no scientific proof that increased water flows and empty reservoirs will protect endangered species. Leave the water flows in the San Joaquin rivers alone and let them be managed by the irrigation districts.

Sincerely,

William F. Kull. P.E., P.L.S.
