BACKGROUND

In August 2015, the State Water Board contracted with Southern California Coastal Water Research Project to establish and facilitate an Expert Review Panel to conduct an examination of ELAP. The Panel members are five experts in the field of environmental laboratory accreditation. The Expert Review Panel released a final report of findings on October 22, 2015, which was presented to the State Water Board by the panel chairperson at the Board Meeting on November 4, 2015. The State Water Board is seeking to improve ELAP by revising existing regulations to address the issues identified in the Expert Review Panel Report.

The Expert Review Panel concluded that ELAP's current regulations are inadequate. The Panel recommended the immediate selection of an appropriate assessment standard and recommended ELAP adopt an existing laboratory accreditation standard that incorporates a quality system approach. The Panel specifically identified the laboratory standard established by The NELAC Institute (TNI) as the most viable option. The NELAC Institute (TNI) is a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization whose mission is to foster the generation of environmental data of known and documented quality through an open, inclusive, and transparent process that is responsive to the needs of the community.

Since release of the report, ELAP staff has engaged the stakeholder community and its two advisory bodies, the Environmental Laboratory Technical Advisory Committee (ELTAC) and the State Agency Partner Committee (SAPC), in its work to correct program deficiencies. After considering alternative options and with input from both committees and the larger stakeholder community, ELAP staff has made a preliminary determination to develop regulations incorporating the 2016 NELAC Institute (TNI) Standard, Volume 1: Management and Technical Requirements for Laboratories Performing Environmental Analysis as the laboratory standard. ELAP will consider revisions to portions of the standard that may be problematic for implementation in California before the formal rulemaking process commences. Once the regulations are proposed for adoption, a public comment period will be held as provided in the Administrative Procedure Act.

Compliance with the new standard may require some currently accredited laboratories to implement new laboratory management procedures or begin documenting procedures already in place. ELAP staff will provide a suite of implementation tools to assist the laboratory community with the transition if the TNI standards are adopted into California regulations. In addition, ELAP staff has made a preliminary determination to recommend to the State Water Board that the regulations allow extended time from the date of adoption for laboratories to meet any new laboratory standard requirements.
